Fare hikes

Though fare hikes aren't coming until 2015, the public will get a chance to debate the MTA's plans later this year before a board meeting in December. The dollar amount of the planned 4 percent fare increase will be determined before the public hearing process.

What to watch in 2014

Looking ahead. Here's 14 things to keep on your radar this year.

New York City will have a busy year.

The new mayor aims to mount a widely progressive agenda, altering many policies enacted by the previous, three-term administration.

But that's not all.

From more restrictive cigarette laws to an outdoor Super Bowl, here are 14 things to watch for in 2014.

ANNA SANDERS
anna.sanders@metro.us

A lot of changes are coming to New York City this year. / GETTY IMAGES

Laws

Tobacco, cigarette limits

The cigarette purchasing age will increase to 21 in mid-May after the city passed some of the country's strictest limits on tobacco purchases last year.

Another law sets the minimum price for a package of cigarettes at $10.50. And through yet another bill, electronic cigarettes will be banned from bars, restaurants, parks and beaches beginning in April.

Budget

Open labor contracts

One of de Blasio's trickiest tasks during his first year will be attempting to negotiate new contracts for 300,000 workers in municipal unions, which are demanding $7 billion in retroactive pay. De Blasio appointed a commissioner of labor relations this week and previously said he would emphasize cost savings in contract talks before passing a budget this June.

Government

New citywide leadership

De Blasio isn't the only liberal aiming to change City Hall. The first woman of color to hold citywide office, Public Advocate Letitia James, also promised to tackle inequality, and Comptroller Scott Stringer proposed turning the office into an innovative think tank.

Entertainment

NYC in the spotlight

Starting Jan. 27, musical icon Billy Joel will perform a concert a month during a residency at Madison Square Garden. Other music legends will be inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame at Barclays Center in Brooklyn this April. Inductees include Peter Gabriel, KISS and Cat Stevens.

Football

Big Apple Super Bowl

While the NFL's "first outdoor, cold weather Super Bowl" set for Feb. 2 may be in New Jersey's MetLife Stadium, NYC officials are bringing the festivities across the Hudson. Ten blocks, from 34th to 44th streets, will make up a Super Bowl Boulevard with free events.

Review

Soda ban in high court

Former Mayor Michael Bloomberg's trademark "soda ban" will be reviewed by the Court of Appeals, New York's highest court, sometime early this year. The law, which limits the size of some sugary drinks sold, was deemed an overreach of executive power by several lower courts in 2013 before the city appealed.

Transit

MTA service changes

The MTA will spend $18 million restoring several bus lines, increasing the frequency of daytime G trains and extending the M train this year. Select Bus Service will come to Harlem in April. After a 14-month disruption, R train service between Manhattan and Brooklyn returns in October.

Politics

Pre-K battle

De Blasio's signature proposal — funding universal pre-kindergarten with an income tax increase — needs approval from state legislators. De Blasio promised substantial year-one progress on the measure but faces an uphill battle.

West Side

Hudson Yards Progress

As part of the Hudson Yards Redevelopment Project, the 7 line extension to 34th Street and 11th Avenue will open this summer.

By the end of the year, Friends of the High Line also hope to open the park's final extension, which wraps around the future Hudson Yards site, encompassing 26 acres of redeveloped property.

Lower Manhattan

Post-9/11 progress

Thirteen years after the Sept. 11 attacks, lower Manhattan will see big changes in 2014. The 9/11 Memorial Museum, located below the memorial plaza, is scheduled to open to the public in the spring after years of construction. The Freedom Tower, also known as One World Trade Center, is also expected to open this year.

City Hall

A new City Council

With the blessing of Mayor Bill de Blasio, progressive Councilwoman Melissa Mark-Viverito is poised to replace former City Council Speaker Christine Quinn after a vote next week. Twenty new council members also joined the legislative body on Wednesday.

Elections

Many more campaigns

After a scandal-filled mayoral election, New Yorkers must brace for more campaign drama. Gov. Andrew Cuomo and a variety of congressional and state legislators are up for re-election this fall. Among them is Harlem Rep. Charles Rangel, running for his 23rd term in Congress.

Policing

A new NYPD

New Police Commissioner Bill Bratton has promised to cut down on stop-and-frisk, relying more on programs like Operation Crew Cut, which targets the small gangs in New York City that largely operate out of public housing projects.

New Year, January 1st. New You, January 8th.

In just a few days, hundreds of students will start fresh at Monroe. Some will transfer in from other colleges seeking smaller classes and a more focused, real world approach. Others will arrive from jobs where they realize staying employed means adding to their skill set with more education.

If you're thinking about transferring, it's not too late. Our generous transfer credit policy will allow you to apply credits earned at previous institutions toward your new degree program so that you can graduate as quickly as possible. We'll also show you how a college of big ideas can also be a small family.

Our classes start after work, on weekends and some are held 100% online, so we can build a schedule that works for you. And whether you seek an undergraduate degree or a graduate program, we'll help you build a customized course of study as unique as your career goals.

NYPD's new top cop promises to mend city's 'rifts'

Return of the Brat. Bill Bratton — once the city's 38th police commissioner — is officially the 42nd at One Police Plaza.

The NYPD officially has a new top cop.

Bill Bratton was sworn in by Mayor Bill de Blasio in front of a packed auditorium at police headquarters on Thursday.

With his signature Boston accent, Bratton spoke fondly of the "depahtment" he first led two decades ago.

"It is home," he said. "And it is great to be back."

And he addressed new challenges: When he headed up the NYPD in the mid-1990s, "terrorism was not an issue."

"I don't think I spent one percent of my time thinking about terrorism," he said. After several briefings in the last few days, he said he estimates that now it's going to take up 30 to 40 percent of his time.

Bratton even had kind words to say about former Police Commissioner Ray Kelly, with whom he has notoriously not had an easy relationship.

"Ray Kelly gave his life to and continues to love this city," he said. Highlighting that Kelly left the city with record low crime rates, he said, "He committed himself to keeping the city safe, and he has in fact done that."

Still, he was explicit about the problems he saw in the department Kelly left behind.

He promised to tailor the NYPD's use of stop-and-frisk more exactingly, citing one of Kelly's programs, Operation Crew Cut, as a good approach. Crew Cut targets efforts at the small gangs responsible for much of the crime in the city.

City braces for snowstorm

Mayor Bill de Blasio is facing his first challenge as a nor'easter bears down on the city days into his tenure.

The new mayor urged New Yorkers to check in on their neighbors, particularly senior citizens and the handicapped, and asked that anyone with connections to people living on the street urge them to go to one of the city's shelters.

Central Park. Man's body pulled from lake

The body of a missing Queens man, 22, was pulled from the Lake in Central Park on Wednesday in what police described as an apparent suicide.

Police said Aronno Haque was last seen Monday near Union Square Park in Manhattan.

On Tuesday, scuba divers with the NYPD began searching the water after some personal belongings were found near the lake. The initial search was unsuccessful. His body was pulled from the water the next day, according to police.

UNLIKE THE NFL, SMALL PLAYS WIN IN POLITICS

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

CNN=POLITICS

With the NFL playoffs roaring to life, like millions of other fans I am eager to see every jaw-dropping highlight: the fingertip catches, the impossible punt returns and the thunderclap sacks. "Yes!" I'll shout, each time one of these gridiron miracles occurs. I'll jump up from the sofa, fist pumping the air while the dog runs and my wife's eyes roll.

And I'll make no apology, even if I spill the chips and dip. Everyone likes to see a big play.

But I also harbor no illusions. Successful teams are not anchored by these marquee moments. Oh sure, all championship teams will see their fair share, but they enjoy that opportunity because game in and game out they play fundamentally good football. And that means they compromise.

A team can't draft new players purely to produce a great defense if the offense is lacking. They can't spend every dollar on a great quarterback without a strong line to protect him. A coach can't tell his team to blitz, run or pass at every chance.

And (here comes the turn) neither can politicians.

As 2014 dawns, whether you are a Democrat, a Republican, a Tea Partier or an independent, you may be aching for some highlight reel plays from your team — dramatic, earthshaking legislation to smash the D.C. gridlock. And while there is certainly nothing wrong with that desire, I'd like to pose a simple suggestion based on years of watching government at all levels: Fight the urge.

These provoke less opposition, are many times rooted in reasonable,acceptable compromise, and they tend to win. Because while the Hail Mary plays may bring us to our feet with their boldness, by definition they are extremist measures that are most likely to send us crashing back to the couch in frustration, cursing the points that might have been more quietly scored to assure victory.

Winter storm scrubs flights along its path

As the snow moved out of the Midwest toward the East Coast, bad weather contributed to 1,620 flights being canceled and 3,465 delayed as of Thursday afternoon, according to FlightAware, an airline tracking service in Houston. Chicago's O'Hare International Airport had 862 flights scrubbed, followed by Newark Liberty International Airport in New Jersey with 329.

Winter storm warnings and weather advisories stretched from Illinois to Maine and as far south as Georgia.

Chicago is expected to have a high of minus-2 on Jan. 6, according to the weather service.

In Cleveland, 8 to 10 inches were expected to fall and Pittsburgh may get 3 to 5, according to the weather service.

Hardest hit will be the New England coast from Maine to Cape Cod and Long Island.

Visibility on Long Island may be cut to less than a quarter mile and wind chills could make temperatures feel close to minus-10 Fahrenheit tomorrow, according to the blizzard warning. BLOOMBERG

Blast. Powerful storm brings Arctic cold, snow to Northeast

The first major winter storm of 2014 bore down on the northeastern United States with heavy snow, Arctic temperatures and strong winds that snarled travel just as many people were returning from holiday breaks.

The wide storm system stretched from the lower Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic coast, with parts of New England including Boston bracing for as much as 14 inches of snow by Friday morning. Some cities along the storm's southern edge expected only minimal snowfall.

The storm is expected to snarl traffic on the I-95 highway corridor between New York and Boston, the weather service said. Coastal flooding was forecast along low-lying parts of New England, and some waterfront highways in Massachusetts were closed by midday Thursday due to high waters.

The weather service said the mass of Arctic air would drop temperatures to levels 20 to 30 degrees below normal, with record lows possible on Friday.

In Boston, public schools were told to close on Friday, extending students' holiday break by a day. REUTERS

Sorry, nerds

Most overrated

Joss Whedon has a huge fanbase, almost all of whom praised his "Much Ado About Nothing," despite it being amateurish, sloppily filmed and (save Amy Acker) poorly acted.

WORST OF THE WORST

Cinema. 2013 was a great year for movies. But here are the ones that made us sad.

Tom Hanks does a decent Walt Disney in the evil "Saving Mr. Banks." / FRANÇOIS DUHAMEL

1 'The ABCs of Death' Twenty-six short films and not one that's better than just OK? Where the "V/H/S" anthology horror series stepped up its game this year, this new franchise crashed right out of the gate. Watching it is like forever peering around the corner, waiting for quality that never comes.

2 'CBGB' The legendary nightclub where American punk and New Wave were born was boarded up over a silly rental dispute. That's only a slightly worse fate than the biopic it received, which is by turns cheesy, wildly miscast and annoyingly disrespectful, dwelling on its filth and ramshackleness in lieu of the music.

3 'Saving Mr. Banks' Disney has long been a punching bag for the way it programs questionable beliefs into impressionable young minds, but few things they've done are as blatantly Bond villain-ish evil as this bastardization of the making of "Mary Poppins." Author P.L. Travers hated the film made of her books. Now that she's long dead, the company has erected a fib in which she didn't totally — she was just a grump with some daddy issues.

4 'Now You See Me' Guys, this movie makes no sense. A lot of blockbuster fare pushes the boundaries of basic realism, but this surprise sleeper hit — about a gang of Robin Hood magicians who may have ties to a cadre of centuries-old sorcerers or something — so relentlessly strains credibility, lacking even its own internal, consistent logic, that it's admittedly impressive.

5 'Upside Down' We feel bad adding to the pile of vitriol heaped upon this international boondoggle, which took a sci-fi premise — a planet with double gravity — and married it to a sub-soap opera "Romeo and Juliet" plot, complete with convenient amnesia. It cost a lot and it tanked, while co-star Kirsten Dunst (opposite a comically moony Jim Sturgess, prattling on about "the secret of the pink bees") looks hugely embarrassed to be involved at all.

6 'Adore' The most boring movie ever made in which Naomi Watts and Robin Wright bang each other's sons, this either needed to be a dark comedy or a surreal fantasy. Instead it played it straight and, even with a terrific Wright performance, became an unintentional snickerfest.

Envy the dead

'World War Z'

The world's first mega-budgeted zombie film is, predictably, compromised. It's not the goreless PG-13 rating that killed it; it's the profound lack of fun, embodied by Brad Pitt as his most tiresomely serious. Admittedly, things perk up in the third act, but even that gives "In the Loop" master swearer (and new "Doctor Who" star) Peter Capaldi nothing to do. Because having him shout insults at zombies would have been too entertaining.

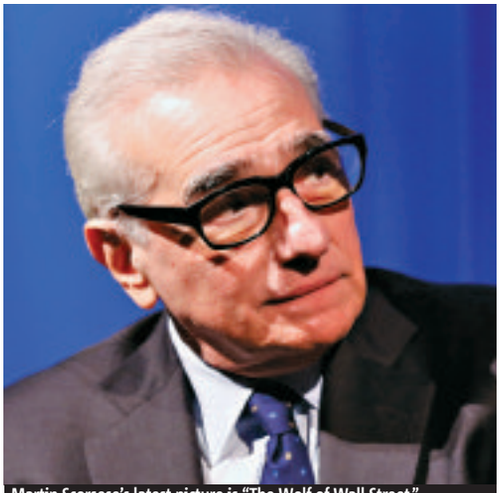
Not going anywhere

Interview. Martin Scorsese says you'd have to stop him from making movies.



Martin Scorsese's latest picture is "The Wolf of Wall Street," about characters arguably even worse than the ones in "Goodfellas." GETTY IMAGES

Martin Scorsese loves talking about other filmmakers' pictures: witness his numerous documentaries on cinema history. But occasionally he's up for talking about his own. His latest, "The Wolf of Wall Street," is an even more hedonistic romp than "Goodfellas," with more nefarious villains: stockbrokers (led by Leonardo DiCaprio) who, from the '80s through the '90s, preyed on the dupes and made a fortune.

On taking on risky projects (like this): "The issue is: Is it worth fighting for? Because it's all about fighting, unfortunately. It's not about good people or bad people — it's about what [the execs] need, what they want to do, what could deliver for the marketplace. It might not be worth it at a certain time in your life."

On the despicable characters in his movies: "They're human beings. And we are not all one thing, are we? We're capable of many different things in different circumstances. … I'm interested in people who are good who do bad things."

Keepin' on

On unfounded rumors he's retiring

"You'd have to stop me yourself. You'd have to tackle me to stop me."

On the new Hollywood: "I don't know who's calling the shots anymore. Seriously. The cinema we know and the cinema we took seriously when we were growing up, it's all changed now. Particularly in a marketplace like this. …. Everything's about where the money is."

On not wanting to meet his real-life protagonist, Jordan Belfort: "I did the same with Henry Hill ["Goodfellas"]. I never met him. I spoke to him once on the phone and that was it. Because they're very persuasive.

On shooting the comical quaaludes set piece, in which DiCaprio's character tries to drive after the pills make him lose control of his body: "I had forgotten that the door of his Lamborghini opens up [not sideways]. I said, 'I don't know, try doing it with your legs.' It's physical comedy, like Jerry Lewis and Jacques Tati."

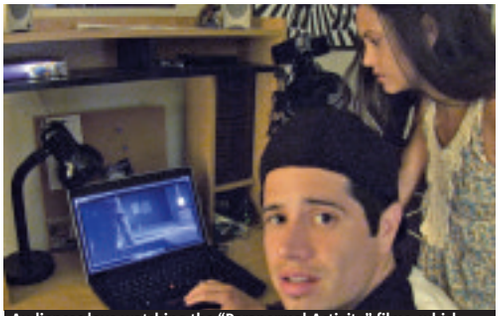
ADMIT ONE

Metro rounds up what's in cinemas this week.



Audiences love watching the "Paranormal Activity" films, which use technology to deliver scares. / PARAMOUNT PICTURES

1 'Paranormal Activity: The Marked Ones' The fifth entry in the deathless found footage series loses "Catfish" directors Henry Joost and Ariel Schulman, but gains Michael Landon's son (promoted after writing the other sequels).

2 'Beyond Outrage' Sixtysomething filmmaker/star Takeshi Kitano follows up his 2010 yakuza saga "Outrage," and there may be a threequel in the works. Hopefully this one features fewer squirm-inducing moments like the first one's dentist scene.

3 'Los Angeles Plays Itself' Thom Andersen's epic, heroic and amusingly grouchy 2003 film essay on the myriad ways the City of Angels has been used and sometimes abused in the movies gets a slightly updated reissue.

Hundreds of New Boats & Marine Accessories for Sale, Tuna Tales from National Geographic Star, Gator Catching, and Hands-On Training Spell Fun for All

Resolve to have a New Year filled with on-water adventures at the 2014 Progressive® Insurance New York Boat Show®. The northeast's premier boating event takes place January 1-5 at the Javits Center, bringing lifelong boaters and enthusiastic dreamers the newest and best in luxury motor yachts, sport fishers, performance boats, sailboats, and thousands of marine accessories. Beyond delivering a shopping paradise for boaters, the world's first and longest-running boat show is the perfect destination for families and out-of-towners looking to ring in the New Year on a boat.

New boaters and lifelong enthusiasts looking to join the more than 88 million Americans that went boating last year can compare brands and shop for deals on everything from motor and sailing yachts, sport fishers and performance boats to sailboats and even kayaks. With some models financing as low as $250 per month, there are budget-friendly options for every boater at the Progressive® Insurance New York Boat Show®. Plus, attendees can shop for insurance, financing and boating gear, plus brush up on boating education, all under one roof.

Special features at the 2014 Progressive® Insurance New York Boat Show® include:

Meet Captain Dave Carraro from National Geographic Channel's Wicked Tuna

Dave Carraro is the fiercely competitive captain of the FV-Tuna.com on National Geographic Channel's smash hit show Wicked Tuna. Dave holds a U.S.C.G 100-ton Master License and has an invaluable 32 years experience with Gloucester Fishing Charters. A native of northern New Jersey, he began fishing with his dad as a kid and has done so almost every day for the past 33 years!

Fred's Shed Interactive Learning Center

DIY seminars and workshops covering boat and motor maintenance, repair and upgrades.

Watch, learn and do! If you're a do-it-yourselfer or boat owner interested in learning new techniques for taking care of your boat or motor, head to Fred's Shed for practical, professional advice. Free daily sessions cover a variety of topics, including keeping your boat "shipshape", choosing and installing marine electronics and maintaining gas engines.

Watch certified marine technician and expert wrench slinger "Fred" demo tools and techniques on actual boat and motor cutaways.

Learn how to maintain, repair or upgrade your boat or motor.

Do take part in discussions, ask questions and participate in hands-on clinics.

Together, "The Boating Guy" and certified marine service technician "Fred, The Outboard Doctor" bring more than 50 years of boating and "wrench-slinging" experience to the Shed.

Swampmaster Gator Show

Thrills, laughter, and action-packed educational fun for all ages! Watch a skilled demonstration of alligator handling as the Swampmaster—expert alligator handler Jeff Quattrocchi—catches a wild alligator with his bare hands! It's a unique opportunity to see the natural behavior of a true wild gator in person! After the show you can hold a baby gator and have your picture taken with the Swampmaster.

Enter to Win a 2014 Yamaha Personal Watercraft VX Deluxe and Trailer—a $10,249 value!

Don't miss your chance to win! The Yamaha Personal Watercraft VX Deluxe is the lightest 3-person ride in the industry, offering great acceleration, an agile ride and great range with fewer fill-ups.

Discover Boating for less than $250/month

Discover BOATING

Think owning a boat is out of your reach? Think again! When it comes to enjoyable ways to spend your leisure time, boating is far more affordable than you may realize. Be sure to check out this showcase of boats you can finance for less than $250 per month.

When you compare the costs of boating to a single day at an amusement park or a trip to any major league game, you'll find that dollar for dollar, boating is really quite affordable. See for yourself how boating can stretch your vacation and leisure time budget.

Fun for the little skippers

Children of all ages can enjoy an entire day of seeing and boarding hundreds of dream boats, building a nautical masterpiece of their own, getting their feet wet while navigating a mini-lake in their own paddleboat, and taking photos with their favorite underwater friend SpongeBob SquarePants.

De Blasio could eye changes to real estate

ARE YOU READY TO PAY MORE ON YOUR PROPERTY TAXES?
ISTOCKPHOTO

Looking ahead. Will the new mayor raise property taxes?

Mayor Bill de Blasio's campaign pledge to pay for universal preschool by hiking income taxes on the wealthiest New Yorkers is likely to come up against election-year politics, with Gov. Andrew Cuomo and the entire state legislature on the 2014 ballot. But unlike income taxes controlled by Albany, de Blasio has a bigger say on other levies — particularly those imposed on real estate.

Former Mayor Michael Bloomberg twice convinced the City Council to cover budget shortfalls by raising property taxes, including a record 18.5 percent jump in 2002, when typical co-op owners saw their tax bills climb by about $500 a year. That hike brought the effective tax rate on co-ops and condos to 13 percent of assessed value, up from about 11 percent, experts say.

Although the amount that each residential and commercial asset class pays fluctuates based on changes in property values, the ratio each pays is more or less static. That's because it's politically difficult to tweak the ratios and ask, say, a single-family homeowner in Queens to shell out extra so that their share is closer to that of a Fifth Avenue co-op.

Let's hope New York City's new mayor, Bill de Blasio, doesn't increase real estate taxes.
AFP, GETTY IMAGES

At current rates, Class 1 properties, or single-family homes, pay 78 cents for every $100 in market value of the property, while Class 2 homes, which include condos and co-ops, pay as much as $3.83 for every $100, experts say.

"There is tremendous variability," said Charles Brecher, the research director for Citizens Budget Commission, an independent watchdog group.

The mayor and City Council have the power to make across-the-board increases to the nominal tax rate. They can also slice up the pie a bit differently, so that one type of property pays more or less than another, as long as no one slice rises by more than 5 percent in a year, experts say.

The imbalance — which exists because tax law treats co-ops like rental buildings, in part because some co-ops also have rental units — has long been seen as a fundamental problem with the city's system. But significantly changing it would require legislation from Albany. And with those single-family homes typically located in middle class or even poor areas, any effort to make the people who live there shell out more taxes would, for many, be politically unpalatable. C.J. HUGHES

TheRealDeal.com is a daily blog and monthly magazine covering real estate in the New York metro area.

THE REAL DEAL

The dilemma

Why rates could increase

The new mayor has to balance the city's $70 billion plus budget, and there's little room to cut because about 75 percent of that total is mandated spending, experts say.

So de Blasio might be tempted to push the City Council to bump up that 13 percent rate for co-ops and condos to drum up more money.

As with many tax changes, however, there could be blowback.

"Administratively, this would be an easy thing to do," said George Sweeting, of the city's Independent Budget Office. "Politically, it would be very hard."

An alternative

Taxing hotels

There are other taxes that could be tweaked to boost revenue, like the hotel room tax. For much of 2013, this rate stood at 5.8 percent, which would have generated $521 million, said the Office of Management.

But bowing to pressure from the hotel industry, which says the tax hurts tourism, the City Council let the rate drop to 5 percent in November, which means the city will now collect $70 million less in revenue, Sweeting said.

For his part, de Blasio believes tourism will be fine, and he supports reinstating the higher rate, according to news reports.

Quoted

"New York's property taxes are without a doubt some of the most complex, opaque property taxes of any major jurisdiction. There's room for improvement."

George Sweeting, Independent Budget Office

Horoscope

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. Today will be busy and demanding. Stay focused on what needs to be done.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. Don't be deceived by rumors; someone may be trying to manipulate you. Use your own judgment and avoid risk-takers.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Take some time to be alone. Leave your work for tomorrow. This is a good day to muse about the past and the future. You'll feel better prepared to make changes after you've had a break.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Keep pace with the go-getters. You are too busy to make time for people with no direction. Do what's best for you.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Get a checkup if you have been having health concerns. Don't let things slide. Follow through with your goals to give yourself a greater sense of purpose.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. You may want to check up on someone. Your intervention may not be welcome, but it will be helpful.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Maintain a skeptical attitude. Insincerity from your acquaintances is likely to lead you astray. You'd do better to focus on your professional life instead of personal concerns.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. It's time to take care of unfinished business. Let go of projects that have no legs, and instead focus on those with promise.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. To avoid conflict, you should maintain an impartial point of view. If you are critical, you will meet with resistance.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Close listening will be beneficial. Your observations will provide insights that will change your path. If you put yourself in someone else's shoes, you'll feel fortunate.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. It's time to enjoy friends and thought-provoking entertainment.

Those who obey the law have no fear

Re: 'Who needs enemies when you have the government?' (Metro, Jan. 2) I think it's very unfortunate that letter writer Janice Amato objects to the decision by the judge who decided that the NSA's spying is legal. As long as we are not doing anything wrong, we don't have to worry about punishment from our government. The people we need to be fearful of are terrorists like al Qaeda and terrorist collaborators like Lynne Stewart. After all, it wasn't our government that massacred almost 3,000 people in one day.

Hypocrisy takes wing

Re: 'Oh, for duck's sake' (Metro, Dec. 23) I am really disappointed in this letter and had to write. The call of bigotry, I feel, was correct. But in the final line it ridicules Christianity and any other religion with the line "worldview that isn't rooted in ancient mythology/idiocy." How dare she. How is it OK to call the cast of "Duck Dynasty" bigots, then in the same breath put down Christianity? I think she needs a clue about what bigotry is.

Breaking down the Jets offseason

NFL. The Jets have plenty of money and draft picks to use to improve this offseason.

A year of overachievement is in the rearview mirror for the Jets, who exceeded nearly every expectation at 8-8. But a pivotal offseason awaits this team and an organization that should have more than $30 million in cap space and nine draft picks to potentially take the next step and be a playoff team.

The Jets will have to determine just how much talent is given to head coach Rex Ryan this offseason in what will be the final year of his contract.

KRISTIAN DYER
sports@metro.us

Free agents to target

1 Walter Thurmond, safety, Seattle — A four-game suspension for violation of the league's substance abuse policy likely won't scare off general manager John Idzik, who hasn't been afraid to roll the dice on players.

2 Eric Decker, wide receiver, Denver — The Broncos receiver has improved his reception numbers and yardage each season and seems primed to take that next step. He has 87 receptions this year — more than the Jets' top two receivers combined.

Free agents to re-sign

1 Jeff Cumberland, tight end — This season was a step forward for Cumberland, who emerged as a steady threat down the field with reliable hands, and the ability to block. He provides good value at the position, too.

2 Willie Colon, right guard — The Jets could use some stability on the offensive line after losing two starters last offseason. Colon wasn't perfect but was effective. It would be wise to re-up the veteran and perhaps draft his replacement this season.

Dark horse draft picks

1 C.J. Fiedorowicz, tight end, Iowa — While someone like Eric Ebron will wow at the combine with his flashy numbers, the Iowa tight end might be the more solid professional player. You can grab him in the second round.

2 Phillip Gaines, cornerback, Rice — You probably haven't heard of the corner who was so good in Conference USA play he could lock down a whole half of the field. He has good instincts, but is undersized, which will cause him to drop.

Wild-card weekend

The first two weekends of the NFL playoffs are arguably the best in sports. The first of those arrives this weekend with four intriguing matchups.

- Chiefs at Colts (-2.5)
  4:35 p.m., NBC
  Suddenly Andrew Luck and the Colts are favored in a matchup with a team that was 9-0 heading into its bye week. It was just two weeks ago the Chiefs hosted the Colts and lost 23-7, so you understand the point spread. They always say it's hard to win twice. Maybe not that hard.
  Our pick: Colts

- Saints at Eagles (-2.5)
  8:10 p.m., NBC
  The Saints struggle badly away from the Superdome (3-5) and we've got bad news for them in the form of a forecast for 20-degree weather at Lincoln Financial Field. The battle to watch will be between Saints defensive coordinator Rob Ryan and Philadelphia head coach Chip Kelly's high-octane offense, led by LeSean McCoy and Nick Foles.
  Our pick: Eagles

- Chargers at Bengals (-7)
  1:05 p.m., CBS
  The Chargers snuck into the playoffs thanks to a win by the Bengals themselves (and the Jets, among others). Hopefully they won't regret playing hard against the Ravens. But it's hard to know which Andy Dalton will show up (33 TDs, 20 INTs) in any given game. San Diego's middling defense is going to have to step up.
  Our pick: Chargers

- 49ers (-3) at Packers
  4:40 p.m., FOX
  San Francisco, the only road favorites of wild-card weekend, head to the 8-7-1 Packers, despite being the hottest team in football. The Niners have closed out the season with six straight wins — the longest streak heading into the postseason — including one over the No. 1 seed Seahawks. But of course, the Packers did not have Aaron Rodgers for much of their season.
  Our pick: 49ers

Cutler re-signs with Bears

The short-lived speculation that Jay Cutler could be a fit for the Jets next season can officially be closed. The Bears quarterback re-signed with Chicago for seven years and, according to ESPN, at least $50 million in guaranteed money. The Bears went 8-8 and missed the playoffs this season.

Three Rangers making trip to Sochi call it 'great honor'

NHL. The U.S. team lost a heartbreaker to Canada in the last Olympics on an overtime winner by Sidney Crosby.

Ryan Callahan will be making his second Olympic appearance, while Stepan and McDonagh are both going for the first time. / GETTY IMAGES

The U.S. Men's Olympic hockey team will have a decidedly Rangers flavor.

Ryan Callahan, Ryan McDonagh and Derek Stepan were formally named to the U.S. Men's Olympic hockey team for the 2014 Sochi Games following the Winter Classic.

The 2014 Olympics will mark the second time Callahan will participate in the Olympic Games, while McDonagh and Stepan are first-timers.

"It's exciting, it's a big honor," Stepan said in a conference call with Callahan and McDonagh. "It's a great honor. I wasn't sure if I was going [to be on the team] or not and it's something I'm very grateful for."

Team USA is one of the pre-tournament favorites to medal, due in part to winning silver at the 2010 Vancouver Games, a team Callahan was on. Heading into Russia, he is part of the player leadership committee, along with David Backes, Dustin Brown, Zach Parise and Ryan Suter.

"I think the biggest thing I took out of Vancouver was how fun it was, and how much of an honor it was, how proud I was to represent the USA and our country. You don't know how many chances you're going to get at it and now I have another crack at it," Callahan said. "I think being over there, it's a weird style tournament, round robin, stuff you're not used to. But I'm going to try to enjoy the overall experience again and thankful I have another shot."

Quoted

"From the guys that were named, everyone's talented. ... That many talented players on the team, I think we have a good shot."

Scott takes PGA award over Woods

The continuing resurgence of Tiger Woods wasn't enough to beat out Masters champion Adam Scott for player of the year, as voted on by the Golf Writers Association of America.

Scott won four tournaments, including two on the PGA Tour, while Woods won five — but no majors. Woods lost by five votes out of 218. METRO
